Gen. D. H. Hill.

A correspondent of the Richmond Enquirer furnishes the following interesting sketch of General Daniel H. Hill, now commanding this department:

As the two Generals, A. P. and D. H. Hill, are frequently confounded, I will, to individualize them, give a brief sketch of the latter, a sketch of the former gentleman having already been given to the public.

Gen. D. H. Hill is the descendant of an distinguished revolutionary ancestor. His grandfather, Col. Hill, commanded a regiment at the battle of Hanging Rock, and was severely wounded there. He was afterwards present at King's Mountain, which battle he is said to have planned, but was incapacitated by his wound from taking part in it. So formidable was his influence in the rebel cause, that the British made him an object of special vengeance. His residence, with its numerous out buildings, they destroyed by fire, and his large iron works in which Col. Isaac Hayne (the martyred patriot) was his partner, were also burned by the tories, and a hundred negroes carried off. For these great losses the two families never received the slightest remuneration. Two sons of Col. Hill were school-fellows of Gen. Andrew Jackson.

Gen. Hill's maternal grandfather was also a Revolutionary patriot, and pronounced by Gen. Sumter the bravest man in his army.

D. H. Hill is not unworthy of his ancestry. As a young lieutenant, he won his spurs in Mexico. His native State, ever appreciative of the merit of her sons, presented him with a beautiful wrought sword, bearing this inscription:

"South Carolina to Major Daniel H. Hill, late of of the United States Army, now Professor of Mathematics a memorial of gallant conduct in service at Monterey, Contreras, Cerro Gordo, Vera Cruz and Chapultepec, Mexico."

After leaving the army he was, for some years, Professor of Mathematics in Washington College Va., and at the time North Carolina seceded was Superintendent of the North Carolina military institute. He is the author of a very able work of Mathematics, called Hill's Elements of Algebra. He has also written several highly prized books on religious topics—the "crucifixion" and Sermon on the mount," &c.

He is about thirty-nine years of age, slight in figure, and rather delicate in health; but he shrinks from no hardships, spares himself no fatigue, and exposes his life with a coolness which, were it not that he considers his life but a secondary object, when compared with the interest of his country, would be suicidal. As to what he has accomplished in the present war, from the time he was first appointed by Governor Ellis to take measures for arming the State of North Carolina to the present moment, we leave for the future historian to tell. As a Christain, a gentleman, a scholar and a patriot, he stands "sans peur et sans reproache."

"OLD STONEWALL'S" WIT.—A Richmond correspondent of the Memphis Appeal, tells the following good one on "Old Stonewall":

A propos of General Stonewall, I must be permitted to tell you a little story of him that is quite characteristic. Two or three days ago he was talking with an old acquaintance in this city, a friend of times before the war, who thought he would attempt to find out something of Jackson's plans. "General," said he, "pardon me if I ask an improper question, but I should be greatly obliged to you if you would tell me where you are going next." A rocky smile broke over the stubble of the Stonewall countenance. "Can you keep a secret?" asked he. "Oh yes," replied his friend. "Are you quite sure of it?" renewed Jackson. "I think so." "Then, so can I." The interview terminated in kindly adieu.

KIDNAPPING NEGROES.—The Yankee authorities have engaged largely in this business recently at Memphis. We learn that on several occasions boat loads of contrabands, men, women and children, have been dispatched up the river to Cairo, and that the work is still going on. Our informant witnessed the departure of a portion of this new commercial commodity, and assures us that the fact can be attested by hundreds of witnesses.

The negroes were gathered from plantations in the vicinity of the enemy's lines at Memphis and on the river—principally the latter. Near some of the landings most of the plantations have been entirely stripped of servants. The robbery has been a wholesale one, so far as they could safely accomplish it. A few negroes were enticed away by the promises of the thieves, but most of them were carried off forcibly, against their own will as well as the remonstrances of their masters. For what purpose they are to be used at the North it was not stated; but some of the unguarded of the Federal soldiery intimated that they were to be scattered among the farming community of Southern Illinois, Indiana and Ohio.—Memphis Appeal.

WE LEARN BY TELEGRAPH this morning that there are three of the enemy's steamers off Fort Fisher. They captured last night a sloop deeply loaded, from her looks supposed to be the Spray, Capt. Brown, of Wilmington, inward bound.—Wilmington Journal.

[illegible] The 8th volume commences with the new year 1862. [illegible] make it the most brilliant year in the history of THE TIMES. It will commence with Three Beautiful Prize Stories. Its illustrations will be increased, and its typographical appearance will be improved by a still greater degree. The Publishers are determined to keep pace with the improvements of the age: their motto is "PROGRESSION," and as the circulation of THE TIMES enlarges each year, they are determined to add new attractions to its columns and make it the literary paper of the South. With these inducements the Publishers confidently expect several thousand increase in circulation. But as additional incentives to the friends of the South to encourage their own literary and family paper, in which they will find none of that impure and immoral reading which sometimes they get from abroad, the Publishers of THE TIMES offer $2,500 IN PREMIUMS For subscribers to commence with the new volume and the new year. THE TIMES is printed weekly on eight large pages, one paper, at $2 a year, in advance. For specimen numbers and circulars address the Publishers. COLE & ALBRIGHT, nov. 9-tf Greensboro, N. C.

A NORTH CAROLINA PAPER. THE TIMES, A large Eight-Page Weekly, published in Greensboro, $2.00 a year; $1.00 for six months. THE TIMES contains weekly forty columns of choice matter, especially adapted to the family circle. [illegible] The Publishers would earnestly appeal to the families of North Carolina to give THE TIMES a trial; try it for six months, to see if it is not as well to patronize home papers, as those from abroad; to build up home interests and a home pride, and to scatter our substance and our money among strangers. Give THE TIMES a trial and then let it stand upon its merits. "The Times I regard as the very first of our Southern Literary Weeklies."—Rev. C. F. Deems. "I know of no Weekly published anywhere, that is so deserving of public patronage as the Times."—Rev. J. H. Edwards. "There is no pandering to a vitiated taste—every article is of a moral tendency, and calculated both to amuse and instruct."—Wilmington Herald. "One of the handsomest weekly papers published in the Union."—Spirit of the Age. "Let the people of North Carolina encourage their own newspapers."—Raleigh Standard. Address, COLE & ALBRIGHT, Greensboro, N. C.

A Night Attack upon McClellan's Fleet and Camp.

From the Petersburg Express.

A large number of our citizens were aroused from their slumbers yesterday morning about half-past twelve o'clock, by the loud and rapid discharge of artillery. The night was very dark, but the flashes of the guns were distinctly seen in North-easterly direction, and plainly indicated that the cannonading was on James river, in the neighborhood of City Point. The firing continued incessantly for about two hours, when it measurably slackened, and in a few moments ceased entirely. Enquiries for the cause of this firing commenced at early dawn yesterday, and in the market place, no other subject was mentioned, but the heavy canonading. No one could give any information, and all was suspense, until about 8 o'clock, when a courier arrived, from whom we gathered some particulars, not altogether satisfactory, but believed to be reliable in the main.

The cause of the cannonading was a night attack upon McClellan's fleet and camp from the south bank of James river. The guns intended to operate against the fleet were placed in eligible position about Coggin's Point, and those designed to rouse up the sleepers in the grand army, were located along the bank of the river at points below Coggin's. The first discharge was from "Long Tom," of Walker's battery, which was the signal for a general discharge, and instantly a fringe of flame lined the river bank for a distance of three or four miles. The roar was deafening, and the echoes reverberated for many miles around. After the first round from our pieces, the many lights which twinkled from the foremasts of the Federal fleet suddenly disappeared, showing that the enemy had been aroused, and knew that danger was about. The extinguishing of the lights made but little difference, however, as our guns had been sighted before dark, and all that remained for our brave boys to do, was to load as rapidly as possible.—Parties present say they distinctly heard "crashing" on the river, but whether caused by our balls, or the colliding of Yankee craft in their efforts to get out of the way, it was impossible to tell.

One thing is very certain, that if we did not sink or destroy many of the enemy's transports, we certainly produced great consternation among them, as the entire number, supposed to be largely over one hundred, had weighed anchor, and were nowhere to be seen yesterday morning at daylight. It is thought to be a matter of impossibility, that we could have fired so many shots, into so large a number of vessels and so crowded together, without inflicting serious damage. But unless the enemy tells the truth, which is something they rarely do, we shall never know what damage our night attack inflicted.

The enemy's boats replied promptly, but were compelled to fire at random, and therefore did us but little damage. One of the shells from a gunboat exploded among a portion of the men attached to Dabney's Battery. Wm. T. Dalton, of Louisia county, was struck about the throat, and instantly killed; Thos. Farquhar, of Richmond, was wounded severely in the left thigh; and Patrick Graham, also of Richmond, was wounded slightly in the left shoulder.

The only other casualties that we have ascertained, were caused by the premature firing of a gun attached to Page's battery. The piece becoming rather hot, the man whose duty it was to press the vent, withdrew his thumb while the men were in the act of loading, and the gun was discharged. Alexander H. Tacker, from Hanover county, who was ramming the gun, had both hands shockingly mangled. They were amputated subsequently at the wrist. John Brooks, also of Hanover, was terribly burnt in the face. The wounded were brought up yesterday and conveyed to the Confederate hospital on Washington street. Some four others were wounded, but very slightly.

It is thought that such of our guns as were placed to command portions of McClellan's camps, mush have caused great injury to the Hessians. They were all sighted by daylight, and the camps were in fair range. But, as we have said before, the darkness of the night, with a river more than a mile in width intervening, utterly precluded the possibility of ascertaining anything definitely. Such must always be the result of night attacks at long range.

The attack will be productive of at least one good result. It will teach the enemy that his present "base of operations, is not entirely secure from assault," as much as he has boasted of the country; and it would not surprise us to hear at an early day, that he had removed to safer quarters.

All was quiet in the river yesterday at last accounts from there, but whether our authorities are content to allow matters to remain so, we have no means of ascertaining.

LATER.

We conversed with a gentleman last night who spent yesterday at a place on the other side of James River, which commanded a fine view of McClellan's camp and the fleet. He says the fleet has not entirely disappeared, as he counted ninety [illegible] there, after having counted forty-seven previously, as they proceeded down the river. He was unable to discover that any of the vessels bore marks of injury.—Yesterday morning at 8 o'clock, a gunboat proceeded down the river, flying a white flag, and a transport followed immediately after, displaying the yellow flag. Strange to say, the gunboat, although showing the white flag, was open for action, and when nearing the old Fort known as Hood's threw several shells into the bank as a feeler for rebels.

Last night at 10 o'clock, a large fire was raging apparently in the immediate vicinity of Berkeley. Our informant was too far distant to be positive as to the exact locality, but the fire was in that direction, and it is suggested by some that the Federals are probably about to evacuate and are destroying valuables which they find it somewhat inconvenient to carry off.

From Missouri.

The St. Louis Republican's correspondent at Canton, Lewis county, Mo., writes:

The rebels or bush wackers seem to be pretty rapidly gaining the upper hand in this portion of the country.

I do not know the cause that led to the removal of the troops from the counties of Lewis, Clark, Knox, Scotland and others adjoining; but as a citizen and Union farmer, I can testify to the bad effects it is having upon us. We do decidedly carry our lives in our hands. So violent have the rebels and their sympathizers become in their threats and actions, that not a Union man in any of the above named counties considers his life and property secure from day to day, and we know not to whom to look for protection. The nearest troops are at Palmyra and they are so far off and inactive that they excite no alarm in our rebel neighbors. A Union man named Pratt was murdered last Wednesday in Lewis county by a rebel named Baker and others. Pratt lived about five miles east of Williamstown, and Baker came with five or six others to his house while he was away, to look for him. An old man named Tuttle was mistaken for him and beat with a gun over the head until nearly insensible, Pratt's wife was also grossly insulted, and they left, taken his saddle, bridle, and other valuable articles. They shortly afterwards met with Pratt and shot him down.

The rade at Monticello is exciting great alarm amongst the loyal citizens. That a rebel band of from seventy-five to one hundred should be able to come into the county seat of Lewis, only twelve miles from the river, and remain unmolested for over six hours committing all sorts of depredations upon loyal citizens levying black mail, robbing them, and taken them prisoners, and finally escape—does not speak well for the activity of the State Militia, and may well cause the most serious apprehensions amongst Union citizens. The rebel boast that so soon as Gol. Glover's "Dare Devils" should leave they would have it all their own way, seems to be rapidly being realized. Let our State Militia bestir themselves, or it will be entirely too late.

READ ALL TO KNOW ALL.

The Parliament of the Confederacy. (I hate and detest the odious words "Congress and States,") will meet in body and soul, at Richmond on the 18th of this month.—The brutes of the North, the enemies of the South, Yankees and hireling foreigners, coming "on Richmond" run away "on the gunboats instead; Lincoln with seven hundred thousand Yankees and foreigners has been beaten in all the great battles. Treason, cowardice, imbecility, whiskey, corruption, humbuggery, vanity, Yankee gold, and above all, the imbecil government of Richmond, have brought the Confederacy to the gates of death. A superior man, the noble, the illustrous, the excelsior General Jackson saved Richmond and the Confederacy. A government of thieves, a nation of thieves and liars without moral responsibility, under the brutal direction of a rail-splitter, will be treated with contempt by all the governments and peoples in both hemispheres.

I am an old man; I have no physical strength to fight the Yankees on the field of battle, but still, I feel the blood warm in my heart. Marat said in "The Friend of the People," the pen is more powerful than the sword. With the Yankees at New Orleans, I cannot go to my home; but while I shall live, I will fight the enemies of the South. Senators, Representatives, every body at Richmond knows Dr. Lemoine.—Well, I am determined to return to Richmond to fight the Yankees with my pen. Let us go "on Washington," and make war-home to the Yankees in Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois. Lincoln is arming the negroes to murder men, women and children of white skin in the South. Tit for tat. There are one million of Yankees and Northern men in the Confederacy, let them answer with their lives and property for all the acts of brutal tyranny committed by the government of Lincoln. Christ said "an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth." I am opposed to the exchange of the ten Yankee generals and the four hundred commissioned officers we have taken as prisoners on the field of battles. Let them remain in our prisons, in hostage or pledge for the performance of conditions for peace. Let all the Yankee soldiers and hireling foreigners be exchanged or paroled; but generals and officers let them remain during the war.

Twelve months ago I was the first man in the Confederacy that published in my "War Lecture" the project of the Conscript Law, and the Guerrilla Law. After the defeat of the great Yankee army in the glorious battles of seven days before Richmond, Lincoln calls for three hundred thousand foreigners more to destroy the South—to murder, to set fire, to rob, to ravage every white woman in the South. Well, tit for tat. Let us go to the Northern States, and tit for tat. Let us have the Conscript Law exactly as it is in France. "Every man from the age of 16 years up to 50 years shall be immediately a conscript during the war." This will bring five hundred thousand men more to the Confederate army; then let us go direct "on Washington" to make war-home to the Yankees in the Northern States.

I have just finished a new Lecture, which is altogether a Southern concern, embracing everything that is American and foreigner from head to foot, compared with the various subjects that now agitate this country, and the commercial nations of Europe, ending with the glorious history of the great battle of New Orleans, and the memorable victory obtained by the first Jackson on the 8th January, 1815, when I received severe wounds in my face and body. I am going to Richmond to deliver this new lecture. The subject is this:

"On the Yankee nation of thieves and demogogues, free love niggers, and the rights of the Southern nation of America."

Dr. R. V. Lemoine.
